Report by the Government of South Africa to the Security Council Committee regarding the monitoring of Member States' compliance with Security Council resolution 1591 (2005) on the Sudan

Introduction

This report by the Government of South Africa is submitted pursuant to operative paragraph 3 (a) of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1591 (2005), requesting Member States to report to the Security Council Committee on the Sudan, on the actions they have taken to implement the measures imposed by the resolution.

Action taken by the South African Government in terms of the implementation of the arms embargo on the DRC

The regulation of arms transfers in South Africa is undertaken by the National Conventional Arms Control Committee (NCACC) in terms of the following legislation:

1. The National Conventional Arms Control (NCAC) Act, which was promulgated on 1 May 2003 to replace the Armaments Development and Production Act (Act No. 57 of 1968).

The Act enables the NCACC to ensure the implementation of a legitimate, effective and transparent control process, which would foster national and international confidence in the control procedures. The NCAC Act provides the legal framework to establish, apply and ensure a legitimate, effective and transparent control process which conforms to international law, norms and practices, as well the international obligations and commitments of the Republic with regard to United Nations Security Council arms embargoes.

The Act lays down a set of criteria and guiding principles to be used in the assessment of conventional arms transfers. These criteria and guiding principles are based on internationally accepted norms and, inter alia, include consideration of human rights and fundamental freedoms, the adherence to international treaties' and agreements. These criteria stipulate, amongst others, that the NCACC must:

- a) Avoid endangering regional and international peace and stability by introducing destabilising military capabilities into a region, which could aggravate or prolong any existing armed conflicts;
- b) Adhere to international law, norms and practices and the international obligations and commitments of South Africa, including United Nations arms embargoes; and
- c) Avoid contributing to terrorism and crime.

2. The Firearms Control Act (Act No. 60 of 2000).

In terms of Section 73 of this Act, no person may import or export firearms and ammunition without the necessary permit. The Act, as well as the NCAC Act, makes provision for the NCACC to authorise the export of firearms and ammunition against the set criteria contained in the NCAC Act.

The NCACC has not authorised the transfer of arms to any of the conflict groups or parties in the Sudan, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 1591 (2005).
